

Mystery

T.S

It's a mystery why he is still alive.

Normally people die when they are snatched and the cross is cut into them, when they are hung up on tree and the rope is tightened with such savagery that it draws blood.

Yet the man still lives, days, weeks later, eyes white and wide as he swings back and forth.

I swear I didn't want to do it, but my mates did. It's easier to agree with the hate than listen to the part of me that knows it's wrong.

When he was found the next day, his saddened and furious brethren tried to cut him down.

That was when he began screaming. He hasn't stopped since.

Loud, bubbling shrieks, that sometimes turn into squealing laughter.

No-one had cut him down. Teach the man's killers a lesson.

My friends have certainly learned it. They're all dead.

Some were murdered in vengeance. Others had more ... sinister endings.

I'm the only one left. And I can't take it. Everywhere I looked I see his mad, white eyes absent of pupils, the rotten teeth filled with bugs and dirt.

I can't sleep, can't eat, it feels like there's only one way to escape.

I have to be careful how I decide to do it though.

I don't want to swing for eternity myself.